ILENE GRABEL

Distinguished University Professor and co-director of the MA program in Global Finance, Trade, and Economic Integration at the Josef Korbel School of International Studies of the University of Denver (USA).

Challenging the dominant view that the global financial crisis had little effect on global financial governance and developmental finance, the talk will explore the significant, though gradual and uneven, innovations in global financial governance and developmental finance induced by the crisis. Inspired by Albert Hirschman, Ilene Grabel will argue that meaningful change often emerges from disconnected, experimental and inconsistent adjustments in institutions and policies as actors pragmatically manage in an evolving world.
